

B.Comm./JD Planning Guide – By Major

What is the combined program?

The Combined B.Comm./JD Law program allows most students to obtain both the Business and Law degrees in six years rather than the seven needed to complete both degrees separately.

Depending on their choice of major, students may need to take spring and/or summer classes to complete in this timeframe.

- Students interested in pursuing this program should speak with an Edwards Undergraduate Programs Advisor
- Students pursuing this program spend three years in Edwards completing core and major requirements for the B.Comm. degree before transferring to the College of Law (applying to the program in their third year)
- The B.Comm. degree is typically obtained after completing second year Law requirements
- Both the Clinical Law and Criminal Clinical Law Practicums and Seminars cannot be used toward B.Comm. requirements; students pursuing this option will complete their B.Comm. degree after third year Law
- Moot law courses will not be accepted to fulfill elective requirements
- Admission to the College of Law is not guaranteed
- 60 credit units must be completed as an Edwards student – max 30 credits transferrable from Law + 30 credits from another college or institution
- Students admitted to Law are no longer considered Edwards students and are no longer eligible to receive Edwards awards
